

Alysson Mills is a partner in the law firm Fishman Haygood, LLP in New Orleans. She represents businesses in general commercial litigation cases, investors in securities fraud cases, and clients of all backgrounds in cases implicating the First Amendment. As a member of the Criminal Justice Act panel, she is regularly appointed to represent indigent criminal defendants in federal court. She currently serves as the court-appointed receiver in S.E.C. v. Adams, No. 3:18-cv-252 (S.D. Miss.), in which the S.E.C. charged the defendants with operating a $100 million Ponzi scheme. The Louisiana State Bar Association recently named her Outstanding Young Lawyer of the Year. She teaches First Amendment and media law at Tulane University