

Laura E. Landenwich is a founding member of Clay Daniel Walton & Adams, PLC and practices law in both Kentucky and Indiana. Ms. Landenwich received her Juris Doctor from the Louis D. Brandeis School of Law at the University of Louisville, and her undergraduate degree from Indiana University. She focuses her practice on employment law and civil rights litigation, and is a passionate advocate for her clients who have been the victims of bigotry, ignorance, and the abuse of power. Ms. Landenwich is also an Adjunct Professor of Music Business at Indiana University Southeast. She argued the Kentucky marriage equality cases at the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in August, 2014 and has been recognized by her peers as a Top

Lawyer (Louisville Magazine) and a Super Lawyer.
